

Yeast cells are well known prebiotics that help improve the health status of your herd's rumen—and can ultimately help lead to improved milk production.

Research supporting the information outlined in this graphic is available upon request.